Families in Crisis

Still Committed after all these years

Despite the affluence and all the new development that is taking place, the reality that hunger and the threat of homelessness exists in Frisco can easily be overlooked. Identified as the fastest-growing city in the nation means that essential needs in our community are diverse and the need for assistance in a time of crisis is increasing.

A life-changing crisis, such as serious illness or injury, job loss, death or divorce, can happen to anyone at any time and often results in destabilizing a family.

As the Frisco and Frisco ISD community has grown, so has Frisco Family Services' commitment to our local community.

Client Testimonials

When I first walked into Frisco Family Services, I already felt like my confidence had been stripped away. They not only made sure we kept our utilities connected, and had enough food to eat, but also provided partial financial assistance toward my real estate license. Within a month of earning my license, I had sold my first house! Six months later I was able to get back on track and solely support my family once again.

I went into Frisco Family Services with the hope of a better life for my 2-year-old daughter and myself. After qualifying to receive services, I met with a Case Manager every week to plan how I was going to turn my hope into reality. I was encouraged to be part of the ISSP (Intensive Self-Sufficiency Program), where I attended classes that gave me the tools to get a job for the first time.
